

United States District Court
Western District of Texas
Austin Division

Juan Navarro-Lara,
Petitioner,

v.

Kristi Noem, in her official capacity as Secretary, U.S. Department of Homeland Security, et al
Respondents.

No. 1:26-CV-0218-RP

Federal Respondents' Response to Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus

Federal¹ Respondents provide this response to Petitioner's habeas petition. Any allegations that are not specifically admitted herein are denied. Petitioner is not entitled to the relief he seeks, including relief pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act², Maldonado Bautista, and attorney's fees under the Equal Access to Justice Act ("EAJA")³.

Importantly, Petitioner seeks relief in the form of a court order requesting release or in the alternative a bond hearing pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1226; ECF No. 1 at 20. In effect, Petitioner is seeking an order overturning and vacating an alternative discretionary decision by the immigration court. Id.

² Petitioner did not pay the filing fee for non-habeas claims. See Ndudzi v. Castro, No. SA-20-CV-0492-JKP, 2020 WL 3317107 at *2 (W.D. Tex. June 18, 2020) (citing 28 U.S.C. § 1914(a)). "When a filing contains both habeas and on-habeas claims, 'the district court should separate the claims and decide the [non-habeas] claims' separately from the habeas ones given the differences between the two types of claims. Id. (collecting cases and further noting the "vast procedural differences between the two types of actions"). Given the differences, the Court should either sever the non-habeas claims or dismiss them altogether without prejudice if severance is not warranted. Id. at *3.

³ Barco v. Witte, 65 F.4th 782 (5th Cir. 2023).

This Court does not have jurisdiction to review the immigration judge's decision or reweigh the evidence and find this Court would have ruled differently. 8 U.S.C. § 1226(e); Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 516, 123 S.Ct. 1708, 155 L.Ed.2d 724 (2003) (explaining that 8 U.S.C. § 1226(e) bars an alien's challenge to "a discretionary judgment by the Attorney General or a decision that the Attorney General has made regarding his detention or release" (internal quotation marks omitted)).

Additionally, this Court has entered a stay of removal in this case, and said stay should be dissolved. ECF No. 3 at 3. The Fifth Circuit has just recently held district courts lack jurisdiction to enter Imran v. Harper, No. 25-30370 (5th Cir. 2026) stays of removal.

As such, this Court should deny this habeas petition without the need for an evidentiary hearing and dissolve the stay of removal.

I. Introduction

ICE has lawful authority to detain Petitioner on a mandatory basis as an applicant for admission (also known as "seeking admission") pending his "full" removal proceedings before an immigration judge under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a.

II. Relevant Facts and Procedural History

Petitioner is a native and citizen of Mexico. ECF No. 1 at ¶19. Petitioner entered the United States on or About April 1993, without being admitted or paroled. ECF No. 1 at ¶49. On November 26, 2025, Petitioner was placed into removal proceedings. ECF No. 1 at ¶53. On January 6, 2026, Petitioner requested a custody determination pursuant to Exh. A (IJ Bond Order). The immigration court denied bond on a number of grounds to include lack of jurisdiction and a detailed alternative finding of flight risk. Id.

III. Argument

This Court lacks jurisdiction to overturn a discretionary decision by immigration court.

A. The Court Lacks Jurisdiction to Review a Discretionary Decision regarding Detention and Revocation of Bond.

We start, as always, with jurisdiction.” Texas v. Biden, 20 F.4th 928, 947 (5th Cir. 2021), as revised (Dec. 21, 2021), rev'd and remanded, 597 U.S. 785, (2022). Before addressing any other matters before the Court, jurisdiction must first be established.

Petitioner cannot now use this petition as a vehicle to dispute ICE or the immigration judge’s alternative discretionary findings. Saint Fort v Ashcroft, 329 F.3d 191, 200 (1st Cir. 2003)(noting that the Supreme Court has “read the jurisdiction-limiting provision in § 1226(e) as applying only to review of the Attorney General’s discretionary judgment”) (citing Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 516–517(2003)); see also Loa-Herrera v. Trominski, 231 F.3d 984, 991–992 (5th Cir.2000); 8 U.S.C. § 1226(e).

8 U.S.C. § 1226(e) strips this Court of jurisdiction to hear such a challenge. Section 1226(e) states:

“(c) Judicial review

“The Attorney General’s discretionary judgment regarding the application of this section shall not be subject to review. No court may set aside any action or decision by the Attorney General under this section regarding the detention or release of any alien or the grant, revocation, or denial of bond or parole.”

The bar to judicial review was discussed and analyzed by the Supreme Court and also found that 8 U.S.C. § 1226(e) barred challenges to discretionary decisions. See Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 516, 123 S.Ct. 1708, 155 L.Ed.2d 724 (2003) (explaining that 8 U.S.C. § 1226(e) bars an alien’s challenge to “a discretionary judgment by the Attorney General or a decision that the Attorney General has made regarding his detention or release” (internal quotation marks omitted)); Pensamiento, 315 F. Supp. 3d at 688 (“Congress has eliminated judicial review of discretionary custody determinations); See Blandon v. Barr, 434 F. Supp. 3d 30, 36 (W.D.N.Y. 2020) (while the Court may consider whether the IJ complied with the Court-ordered procedural protections, it does not reweigh the evidence nor consider whether it would have made the same determination as the IJ).

Petitioner is not entitled to judicial review of his most recent bond decision. Even if this Court were to find that Petitioner is only subject to detention pursuant to 8 U.S.C § 1226, the immigration court’s alternative finding establishes that Petitioner is also subject to detention pursuant to §1226 as a flight risk. To the extent that Petitioner asks the Court to second-guess the IJ’s weighing of the evidence, that claim is directed solely to the IJ’s discretion and is unreviewable.

B. Alternatively, Respondent Is Also Subject To Detention As An Applicant For Admission.

Respondents contend that Petitioner’s detention is governed by INA § 235, 8 U.S.C. § 1225, because as an alien who entered without inspection or parole was and remains an applicant for admission. As such, Petitioner is subject to mandatory detention and not entitled to a bond hearing before the immigration judge. Respondents further contend Petitioner should be required to exhaust administrative remedies before bringing a habeas challenge in federal court.

Respondents further rely upon Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. 216 (B.I.A. 2025). There, the BIA examined the plain language of § 1225, the INA’s statutory scheme, Supreme Court and BIA precedent, the legislative history of the INA and the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (“IIRIRA”), Pub L. No. 104-208, and DHS’s prior practices. After doing so, the BIA held that “under a plain language reading of section 235(b)(2)(A) of the INA, 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), Immigration Judges lack authority to hear bond requests or to grant bond to aliens, like the respondent, who are present in the United States without admission.” 29 I&N Dec. at 225. Respondents contend this Court should rule the same, and many courts within this Circuit agree.⁴

C. Maldonado Bautista Does Not Apply

The Court should deny the habeas petition in this case for the reasons noted above. The December 18, 2025, partial final judgment in Bautista v. Noem, No. 5:25-CV-1873 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 18, 2025), ECF No. 92, is neither binding nor applicable here and presents no basis for granting the petition. First, the Bautista declaratory judgement is void with respect to petitioners and custodians outside the Central District of California because it was issued despite a palpable lack of jurisdiction. Second, the Court should not give preclusive effect to the declaratory judgment because it is on appeal, creating a serious risk of inconsistent judgments and unfair results if the Bautista judgment is reversed or vacated on appeal. Finally, issue preclusion is inapplicable here, particularly as preclusion principles apply with less force both against the government and in habeas corpus proceedings.

1 Under black-letter principles of habeas jurisdiction, the Bautista declaratory judgement has no preclusive effect outside the Central District of California and over custodians who are located outside that District.

The Bautista class sought a declaratory judgment that class members such as Petitioner were unlawfully detained under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2), rather than § 1226(a). This is core habeas relief that must be brought as a habeas claim alone. As the Supreme Court made clear just this year, “[r]egardless of whether [] detainees formally request release from confinement,” if “their claims for relief necessarily imply the invalidity of their confinement[], their claims fall within the core of the writ of habeas corpus and thus must be brought in habeas.” Trump v. J.G.G., 604 U.S. 670, 672 (2025) (internal quotations omitted).

The Supreme Court has imposed two fundamental limits on federal court jurisdiction over core habeas claims. First, “jurisdiction lies in only one district: the district of confinement.” Rumsfeld v. Padilla, 542 U.S. 426, 443 (2004); see also J.G.G., 604 U.S. at 672. Second, a habeas petitioner must name the petitioner’s immediate custodian—i.e., the custodian who has actual custody over the petitioner and can produce the “corpus.” Padilla, 542 U.S. at 435. “Failure to name the petitioner’s custodian as a respondent deprives federal courts of personal jurisdiction” needed to issue relief. Stanley v. Cal. Supreme Court, 21 F.3d 359, 360 (9th Cir. 1994); Padilla, 542 U.S. at 444. Thus, a federal district court is wholly without authority to issue the writ in favor of a habeas petitioner who seeks habeas relief in a judicial district in which he is not confined, and the immediate custodian is not located. Padilla, 542 U.S. at 442-43. And a “judgment entered without personal jurisdiction over a defendant is void as to that defendant.” Combs v. Nick Garin

Trucking, 825 F.2d 437, 442 (D.C. Cir. 1987).

Given that a challenge to the legality of detention is a core habeas claim, class-wide declaratory relief is inappropriate in the habeas context. Calderon v. Ashmus, 523 U.S. 740, 747 (1998) (declaratory judgment action not appropriate to address “validity of a defense the State may, or may not, raise in a habeas proceeding” in part because “the underlying claim must be adjudicated in a federal habeas proceeding”); Fusco v. Grondolsky, No. 17-1062, 2019 WL 13112044, at *1 (1st Cir. June 18, 2019) (declaratory judgment action must be dismissed when habeas available). Indeed, a class-wide declaratory judgment imposed from outside the district of confinement cannot be squared with the district-of-confinement requirement of habeas, where the relief is an order of release, 28 U.S.C. § 2241(a), not a declaration of legal rights that can later be enforced. See Calderon, 523 U.S. at 747 (1998); Fusco, 2019 WL 13112044, at *1; LoBue v. Christopher, 82 F.3d 1081, 1082 (D.C. Cir. 1996) (holding that the “availability of a habeas remedy in another district ousted us of jurisdiction over an alien’s effort to pose a constitutional attack . . . by means of a suit for declaratory judgment”); Monk v. Sec. of Navy, 793 F.2d 364, 366 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (“In adopting the federal habeas corpus statute, Congress determined that habeas corpus is the appropriate federal remedy for a prisoner who claims that he is ‘in custody in violation of the Constitution . . . of the United States.’ . . . This specific determination must override the general terms of the declaratory judgment . . . statute.”).

Here, the vast majority of Bautista class members are confined outside of the Central District of California by immediate custodians who are also outside the Central District of California and have not been named in the lawsuit. Therefore, the Bautista court lacked jurisdiction to issue habeas relief to all class members who are confined outside the Central District of California by immediate custodians outside that District, and a court’s judgment cannot be binding and preclusive against a party over which it lacked jurisdiction. Burnham v. Superior Court of Cali., 495 U.S. 604, 608 (1990). Indeed, another federal district court has already held that the Bautista declaratory judgment does not have preclusive effect. Order, Calderon Lopez v. Lyons, No. 25-cv-00226 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 19, 2025), ECF No. 12.

In sum, the Bautista court's declaratory judgment purporting to grant relief that at its core sounds in habeas is a legal nullity outside that District. At the time of filing this habeas petition, Petitioner was detained at Dilley Immigration Processing Center in Dilley, Texas, which is outside that judicial district. That ends the matter. But if more were needed, Petitioner's immediate custodian is the Warden and/or Field Director of the Dilley Immigration Processing Center and that individual was not a party in the Central District of California; subjecting the immediate custodian to the judgment of the Central District of California would be inconsistent with the immediate custodian rule. Padilla, 542 U.S. at 439-40; see also Doe v. Garland, 109 F.4th 1188, 1196 (9th Cir. 2024) (holding immediate custodian and not supervisory ICE Field Office Director should be named in habeas petition).

2 The Court should not give preclusive effect to a declaratory judgment that is on appeal

Even if the Bautista declaratory judgment could have preclusive effect outside the Central District of California, that judgment has been appealed to the Ninth Circuit, Bautista. et al. v. United States Department of Homeland Security, et al., No. 25-7958 (9th Cir.), and this Court should not afford preclusive effect to that judgment or to any underlying legal issues in deciding whether to grant habeas relief in this case.

Courts must exercise significant caution before giving preclusive effect to declaratory judgments that are on appeal. Reflexively granting preclusive effect to such judgments could lead to subsequent judgment “from which it may be impossible to obtain relief” even if the first judgment is reversed on appeal. 9 A.L.R.2d 984. Courts should strive to avoid this “evil result[.]” Id. (“both the rule under which the operation of a judgment as res judicata is, and the one under which it is not, affected by the pendency of an appeal, have very unfortunate consequences”); see also 18A Fed. Prac. & Proc. § 4404 (“Awkward problems can result from the rule that preclusive effects attach to the first judgment” while that judgment is subject to an appeal); 18A Fed. Prac. & Proc. § 4433 (the rule that a decision is final for the purposes of preclusion while that decision is pending appeal creates “[s]ubstantial difficulties”).

This problem can be “avoided . . . by delaying further proceedings in the second action pending conclusion of the appeal in the first action.” Collins v. D.R. Horton, Inc., 505 F.3d 874, 882–83 (9th Cir. 2007) (citing Wright & Miller § 4433). In the circumstances here—and particularly given the constraints of 8 U.S.C. § 1252(f)(1)—it would not be proper to impose res judicata effect on a class-wide basis while the declaratory judgment is pending on appeal. See 9 A.L.R.2d 984 (the “only one safe way of avoiding conflicting judgments on the same cause . . . [is for] the final decision on the merits of the second suit should be delayed until the decision on appeal has been rendered”).

3 Accordingly preclusive effect to the Bautista declaratory judgment contravenes other principles of preclusion

Beyond the two most serious problems with giving effect to the Bautista declaratory judgment in this case, three more reasons counsel strongly against doing so.

First, under 28 U.S.C. § 2202, “[f]urther necessary or proper relief based on a declaratory judgment or decree may be granted, after reasonable notice and hearing, against any adverse party whose rights have been determined by such judgment.” To the extent this Court considers whether to award “further” relief than what the Bautista court purported to grant to class members outside the Central District of California, such further relief is neither “necessary [n]or proper.” Indeed, the Ninth Circuit—which of course has appellate jurisdiction over the Central District of California—has rejected waiving the district of confinement rule on prudential considerations given the clear congressional mandate limiting habeas jurisdiction to the district of confinement as provided by statute. Doe, 109 F.4th at 1199.

Second, the circumstances of this case also counsel against applying issue preclusion against the government. The Supreme Court has “long recognized that ‘the Government is not in a position identical to that of a private litigant,’ INS v. Hibi, 414 U.S. 5, 8 (1973) (per curiam), both because of the geographic breadth of government litigation and also, most importantly, because of the nature of the issues the government litigates.” United States v. Mendoza, 464 U.S. 154, 159 (1984). “Government litigation frequently involves legal questions of substantial public importance.” Id. Thus, although the Supreme Court has held the federal government “may be estopped . . . from relitigating a question” when “the parties to the lawsuits are the same,” id. at 163, 164, it is not so precluded in cases where the party seeking to offensively use preclusion was not a party to the initial litigation, see id. at 162. This is because allowing “nonmutual collateral estoppel against the government . . . would substantially thwart the development of important questions of law by freezing the first final decision rendered on a particular legal issue.” United States v. Mendoza, 464 U.S. 154, 160 (1984).

For similar reasons, the government should not be precluded from litigating the issue of the proper detention authority here, where the Petitioner was not a named party to the prior Bautista litigation, but instead merely a member of a fundamentally flawed nationwide class. In such a circumstance, applying preclusion against the government raises the same concern raised in Mendoza—it allows the Bautista court’s decision to freeze the law for all district courts nationwide, and stymies development of the law. This is particularly so because the Bautista court could never grant complete habeas relief to all class members as a result of § 1252(f)(1)—instead, the Bautista class action was merely a vehicle for seeking to use the judgment in individual habeas matters such as this one. At minimum, the court should exercise its discretion to decline to employ offensive issue preclusion, as it does in cases where a non-party seeks to invoke preclusion against a private party. See Syverson v. Int'l Bus. Machines Corp., 472 F.3d 1072, 1078 (9th Cir. 2007) (citing Parklane Hosiery Co. v. Shore, 439 U.S. 322, 331 (1979)).

The court should also decline to give the Bautista declaratory judgment preclusive effect given the existence of several inconsistent judgments from district courts around the country, suggesting that reliance on the adverse judgment in Bautista would be unfair. See Parklane Hosiery, 439 U.S. at 330–31 (citing the existence of prior inconsistent judgments as indicium of unfairness of applying issue preclusion); see, e.g., Altamirano Ramos v. Lyons, – F. Supp. 3d –, 2025 WL 3199872, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 12, 2025); Mejia Olalde v. Noem, No. 1:25-cv-168, 2025 WL 3131942, at *2–3 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 10, 2025); Rojas v. Olson, No. 25-cv-1437, 2025 WL 3033967, at *6 (E.D. Wis. Oct. 30, 2025); Cabanas v. Bondi, 4:25-cv-04830, 2025 WL 3171331 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 13, 2025); Sandoval v. Acuna, No. 6:25-cv-01467, 2025 WL 3048926 (W.D. La. Oct. 31, 2025); Topal v. Bondi, No. 1:25-cv-01612, 2025 WL 3486894 (W.D. La. Dec. 3, 2025); Xiaoquan Chen v. Almodovar, No. 1:25-cv-8350, 2025 WL 3484855 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 4, 2025); Candido v. Bondi, No. 25-cv-867, 2025 WL 3484932 (W.D.N.Y. Dec. 4, 2025).

Third, it is doubtful that issue preclusion is ever appropriate in the habeas context. For instance, in Griffin v. Gomez, the Ninth Circuit held that a prior “class action has no preclusive affect in habeas proceedings.” Griffin v. Gomez, 139 F.3d 905 (9th Cir. 1998). The court later explained that res judicata and collateral estoppel do not apply to habeas proceedings. See Clifton

v. Attorney General, 997 F.2d 660, 662 n.3 (9th Cir. 1993) (recognizing that because “conventional notions of finality of litigation have no place” in habeas and the inapplicability of res judicate to habeas is “inherent in the very role and function of the writ.”) (quoting Sanders v. United States, 373 U.S. 1, 8 (1963)); see also Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 295 (5th Cir. 1977) (“The doctrines of res judicate and collateral estoppel are not applicable in habeas proceedings.”); Hierens v. Mizell, 729 F.2d 449, 456 (7th Cir. 1984) (“a decision in another case is not res judicata as to a habeas proceeding.”).

In sum, the Bautista declaratory judgment has no preclusive effect on this case.

4 The Court need not await a ruling staying or vacating the Bautista declaratory judgment before declining to give it preclusive effect

Assessing whether the Bautista declaratory judgment required granting an individual class member’s habeas petition, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas persuasively explained why the Bautista declaratory judgment need not be followed by other U.S. district courts, even before a court of appeal stays or vacates that order.

A dispute in this posture is unusual, but not unheard of. As Justice Story remarked, the traditional comity between courts “does not prevent an inquiry into the jurisdiction of the court in which the original judgment was given.” Old Wayne Mut. Life Ass’n v. McDonough, 204 U.S. 8, 16 (1907) (quoting Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States § 1313 (1833)). It is “a subject [that] may be inquired into every other court, when the proceedings in the former are relied upon, and brought before the latter, by a party claiming the benefit of such proceedings.” Williamson v. Berry, 49 U.S. (8 How.) 495, 540 (1850); Old Wayne, 204 U.S. at 16–17 (same). Indeed, traditional habeas proceedings normally could only challenge “the power and authority of the court” or other detaining authority “to act.” Brown v. Davenport, 596 U.S. 118, 129 (2022) (quotation omitted). While the conclusions of another court, when enforced onto a peer court, are generally “unassailable collaterally,” an exception has always existed for “lack of jurisdiction.” Trelnies v. Sunshine Mining Co., 308 U.S. 66, 78 (1939); Ex parte Watkins, 28 U.S. (3 Pet.) 193, 202–03 (1830) (Marshall, C.J.) (same).

When the issuing court lacks jurisdiction, “its judgments and orders are nullities; they are not voidable, but simply void, and form no bar to a recovery sought . . . in opposition to them; they constitute no justification, and all persons concerned in executing such judgments . . . are considered in law as trespassers.” Williamson, 49 U.S. at 541 (quoting Elliott v. Piersol, 26 U.S. (1 Pet.) 328, 329 (1828)); Watkins, 28 U.S. at 203 (“An imprisonment under a judgment cannot be unlawful, unless that judgment be an absolute nullity[.]”).

The Court issues this Order with some reluctance. The business of another court is generally beyond this Court’s concern. But the petitioner seeks relief based on the Central District’s orders, leaving this Court no choice but to address their binding effect. Here, a fellow district judge purports to bind all pending and future cases involving the mandatory detention issue to her reasoning in an advisory opinion, disrupting this Court’s extensive immigration docket and the dockets of fellow courts across the Nation. But the Central District’s orders are not binding because the Central District lacked authorization to issue them. The orders are unauthorized because they are advisory and because they violate the INA’s limits on judicial review. Additionally, they would require this Court to act in defiance of Supreme Court precedent. Thus, the Court rejects the petitioner’s assertion that it is bound by the Central District’s orders and must grant relief as a result.

Order, Calderon Lopez v. Lyons, No. 25-cv-00226 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 19, 2025), ECF No. 12, at 11 & 28. Thus, because the Bautista declaratory judgment is void for the reasons discussed above, this Court is not required to wait for a court of appeals to stay or vacate that judgment before this Court declines to give it preclusive effect.

Regardless, even if the Court does not treat the Bautista judgment as void now, the blatant jurisdictional flaws and other points noted above counsel strongly in favor of the Court declining to give it preclusive effect.

III. Conclusion

The Court should deny the Petition in its entirety. The Court (1) is stripped of jurisdiction to review the discretionary determinations the immigration judge [§ 1226(e)];(2) Petitioner is properly classified as an applicant for admission; and(3) Maldonado Bautista does not apply.

This court may be concerned how §1226(e) effects the remedying of harms from illegal detention, but the Third Circuit’s reasoning regarding another jurisdictional stripping statute ,8

U.S.C. 1252(b)(9), rings true here. “Congress has the power to balance the orderly adjudication of claims with concerns about remedying harms from illegal detention.” Khalil v. President, United States of Am., No. 25-2162, 2026 WL 111933, at *10 (3d Cir. Jan. 15, 2026). The balance that Congress struck in § 1226(e), removed jurisdiction from this Court to review these discretionary determinations.

The Court no longer has jurisdiction on the matter, and there is no longer a live controversy regarding the procedural protections provided to the Petitioner.

Respectfully submitted,
