Attorneys for the Federal Respondents

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

Yancarlos Cartaya Benitez,

Petitioner,

v.

Pamela Bondi, et al,

Respondent.

Case No. 2:26-cv-00410-ART-BNW

Federal Respondent's Response to Amended Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus, ECF No. 7

Federal Respondents through undersigned counsel, hereby file their response to Petitioner's Amended Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus, ECF No. 7. The petition should be denied because Petitioner's detention pending removal is authorized under 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(6) and does not violate his due process rights. In addition, his detention is not unconstitutionally prolonged under the Supreme Court Decision, but rather reasonable pursuant to the Supreme Court in Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 701 (2001) as the removal period has not lapsed. This response is supported by the following memorandum of points and authorities.

Respectfully submitted this 19th day of March 2026.

1 Memorandum of Points and Authorities

2 Petitioner Yancarlos Cartaya Benitez's detention pending removal is authorized 3 under 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(6). And it is not unconstitutionally prolonged under the Supreme 4 Court's decision in Zadvydas, 533 U.S. 678. Rather, the detention is "presumptively 5 reasonable" under the Supreme Court's decision. See id. at 701. Notwithstanding this 6 precedent, Petitioner claims his detention is unconstitutionally prolonged and he is entitled to 7 immediate release.

8 Petitioner is subject to a removal order after a finding by an IJ that the Petitioner is 9 removable to Cuba, See NTA, I-213 and IJ Order, attached as Exhibit A. Petitioner has filed 10 a Petition for review with the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals who then issued a stay of 11 removal.

12 Petitioner now brings a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, seeking immediate 13 release. But the Court does not have jurisdiction over the petition, because 8 U.S.C. § 1252 14 bars review of his claims. And even if the Court had jurisdiction, the claims fail on the 15 merits. The procedures followed by DHS regarding Petitioner's detention complied with the 16 INA and relevant regulations Contrary to Petitioner's arguments. The Court should dismiss 17 the petition.

18 BACKGROUND

19 I. Petitioner's Immigration History

20 Petitioner is a 25-year-old alien from Cuba residing in this country, subject to a final 21 removal order. Exhibit A. Petitioner presented himself at the Nogales, Arizona Port of 22 Entry for admission in June 2019 and was determined to be inadmissible and was issued an 23 NTA. Exhibit A. On September 4, 2019, an Immigration Judge ordered the Petitioner 24 removed to Cuba. Exhibit A. Petitioner appealed this decision to the BIA who dismissed 25 the appeal on January 3, 2020. Exhibit B. Petitioner submitted a Petitioner for Review with 26 the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals who issued a stay of removal which remains in effect.

II. Relevant Statutory and Regulatory Background

A. Removal and Detention Under 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)

Where, as here, an alien is subject to a final order of removal, there is a 90-day “removal period,” during which the government “shall” remove the alien. 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(1). Detention during this period is mandatory. See 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(2). And the mandatory removal period begins on the latest of three possible dates: (1) the date an order of removal becomes “administratively final,” (2) the date of the final order of any court that entered a stay of removal, or (3) the date the alien is released from non-immigration detention. 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(1)(B). There are at least three potential outcomes in the event the government does not remove an alien during the 90-day mandatory removal period. First, the government may release the alien subject to conditions of supervised release. See 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(3). Second, the government may extend the removal period if the alien “fails or refuses to make timely application in good faith for travel or other documents necessary to the alien’s departure or conspires or acts to prevent the alien’s removal subject to an order of removal.” 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(1)(C). And finally, the government may further detain certain categories of aliens, including those “inadmissible” under 8 U.S.C. § 1182. See 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(6). Continued detention under this latter category is often referred to as the “post removal period.” Johnson v. Guzman Chavez, 594 U.S. 523, 529 (2021). The INA does not place an explicit time limit on how long detention during the “post-removal-period” can last. See Johnson v. Arteaga-Martinez, 596 U.S. 573, 579 (2022). But the Supreme Court has held that the government may only detain aliens in the post-removal-period for the time “reasonably necessary to bring about that alien’s removal from the United States.” Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 689. And the Supreme Court further clarified that a six-month period of detention is “presumptively reasonable.” Id. at 701. “After this 6-month period, once the alien provides good reason to believe that there is no significant likelihood of removal in the reasonably foreseeable future, the Government must respond with evidence sufficient to rebut that showing.” Id.

1 Further, The Supreme Court held that §1231(a) applies to individuals who are 2 removed and who then reenter without authorization and apply for withholding of removal 3 based on a fear that they will be persecuted or tortured if returned to their countries of 4 origin. Johnson v. Guzman Chavez; see also Johnson v. Arteaga-Martinez. The issue presented in 5 Arteaga-Martinez is whether § 1231(a)(6) requires the Government to offer detained 6 noncitizens bond hearings, the Court held it does not.

7 B. Orders of Supervision

8 In the event the government does not further detain and instead releases the alien at 9 the end of the 90-day mandatory removal period, the government must do so under 10 conditions of supervised release. See 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(3) (providing that an alien who 11 “does not leave or is not removed within the removal period ... shall be subject to 12 supervision”); see also 8 C.F.R. §§ 241.4(j); 241.5. Regulations promulgated pursuant to the 13 INA require that conditions of supervised release include reporting to an immigration 14 officer; making “efforts to obtain a travel document and assist[ing] the [government] in 15 obtaining a travel document”; reporting for physical and mental examinations; obtaining 16 advance approval of travel; and providing ICE with written notice of any address changes.
17 See 8 C.F.R. § 241.5(a).

18 If the alien violates a condition of release, the government can revoke the order of 19 supervision and return the alien to custody. See 8 C.F.R. § 241.4(l). In that scenario, the 20 government must notify the alien of “the reasons for revocation,” and “conduct an initial 21 interview promptly” to give the alien “an opportunity to respond to the reasons for 22 revocation stated in the notification.” See id. § 241.4(l)(1). If the alien is not released after 23 the initial interview, there is a subsequent review process, one which entails a records review 24 and scheduling of an interview which ordinarily takes place within three months of the 25 revocation of release. Id. § 241.4(l)(3). The final review includes an evaluation of any 26 disputed facts, and a decision as to whether the facts as determined support revocation and 27 further denial of release. Id. Thereafter, the government conducts annual custody reviews 28 in accordance with 8 C.F.R. §§ 241.4(i), (j), and (k). Id.

C. Suspension of Removal Under 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(1)(C)

As noted above a separate basis for detention of aliens with final orders of removal is via an extension of the removal period in circumstances where the alien “fails or refuses to make timely application in good faith for travel or other documents necessary to the alien’s departure.” 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(1)(C). In such cases, the government must serve the alien a “Notice of Failure to Comply,” which sets forth the relevant statutory provisions in play (8 U.S.C. §§ 1231(a)(1)(C), 1253(a)) and provides “an explanation of the necessary steps that the alien must take in order to comply with the statutory requirements.” 8 C.F.R. § 241.4(g)(5)(ii). The government must also advise the alien that the “Notice of Failure to Comply shall have the effect of extending the removal period as provided by law, if the removal period has not yet expired,” and that the government is not required to complete any scheduled custody reviews under 8 C.F.R. § 241.4 until the alien has “demonstrated compliance with the statutory obligations.” Id. § 241.4(g)(5)(iii).

LEGAL ARGUMENT

I. The Court Lacks Jurisdiction Over the Petition.

A. The INA and REAL ID Act Deprive This Court of Jurisdiction.

Federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction. See Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 511 U.S. 375, 377 (1994). They “possess only that power authorized by Constitution and statute, which is not to be expanded by judicial decree.” Id. (citations omitted); see also Sheldon v. Sill, 49 U.S. 441, 448 (1850) (“Courts created by statute can have no jurisdiction but such as statute confers.”); cf. Romano v. Warden, FCI Fairton, No. 23-2919 (CPO), 2025 WL 1189877, at *8 (D.N.J. Apr. 24, 2025) (observing, in prison habeas context, “[f]ederal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction,” and where “Congress has committed a decision to the unreviewable discretion of the BOP . . . § 2241 offers no basis for judicial intervention.”).

Through this habeas action, Petitioner challenges his present detention for purposes of executing a final order of removal. Congress, however, divested this Court from hearing such claims by way of the INA and the REAL ID Act. See 8 U.S.C. §§ 1252(b)(9), (g). For

1 these reasons, as discussed below, the Court lacks jurisdiction over Petitioner's claims 2 challenging the revocation of supervised release and re-detention pending removal.

3 At the outset, 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g), as amended by the REAL ID Act, deprives courts 4 of jurisdiction—including habeas corpus jurisdiction—over reviewing “any” claim “arising 5 from the decision or action” to (among other things) “execute removal orders.” Put 6 differently, this provision bars habeas review in federal district court of claims arising from a 7 decision or action to “execute” a final order of removal. See Reno v. American-Arab Anti- 8 Discrimination Committee (“AADC”), 525 U.S. 471, 482 (1999).¹ That provision bars 9 Petitioner's claims here.

10 Indeed, every circuit court of appeals to address the issue has held that § 1252(g) 11 eliminates subject-matter jurisdiction over habeas challenges (including those raising 12 constitutional claims) to an arrest or detention for the purpose of executing a final removal 13 order. See Rauda v. Jennings, 55 F.4th 773, 778 (9th Cir. 2022) (holding court lacked 14 jurisdiction over habeas challenge to the exercise of discretion to execute removal order); see 15 also Tazu v. Att’y Gen. United States, 975 F.3d 292, 297 (3d Cir. 2020) (“The plain text of § 16 1252(g) covers decisions about whether and when to execute a removal order.”); E.F.L. v.
17 Prim, 986 F.3d 959, 964–65 (7th Cir. 2021) (holding § 1252(g) barred review of decision to 18 execute removal order while individual sought administrative relief); Camarena v. Dir., 19 Immigr. & Customs Enf’t, 988 F.3d 1268, 1274 (11th Cir. 2021) (“[W]e do not have 20 jurisdiction to consider ‘any’ cause or claim brought by an alien arising from the 21 government’s decision to execute a removal order. If we held otherwise, any petitioner 22 could frame his or her claim as an attack on the government’s authority to execute a removal 23 order rather than its execution of a removal order.”); Hamama v. Adducci, 912 F.3d 869, 874

24 ¹ Congress initially passed § 1252(g) in the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant 25 Responsibility Act of 1996, Pub. L. 104-208, 110 Stat. 3009. In 2005, Congress amended § 26 1252(g) by adding “(statutory or nonstatutory), including section 2241 of title 28, United 27 States Code, or any other habeas corpus provision, and sections 1361 and 1651 of such 28 title” after “notwithstanding any other provision of law.” REAL ID Act of 2005, Pub.
L. 109-13, § 106(a), 119 Stat. 231, 311. After Congress enacted the Homeland Security Act of 2002, § 1252(g)’s reference to the “Attorney General” includes the Secretary of Homeland Security. 6 U.S.C. § 202(3).

(6th Cir. 2018) (“Under a plain reading of the text of the statute, the Attorney General’s enforcement of long-standing removal orders falls squarely under the Attorney General’s decision to execute removal orders and is not subject to judicial review.”)²

The Third Circuit’s decision in Tazu is instructive. There, the petitioner sought to challenge the government’s decision to re-detain him for prompt removal, claiming that a revocation of supervised release without notice and a revocation interview allegedly violated agency rules and due process. See Tazu, 975 F.3d at 298. The Third Circuit found that claim barred by 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g) because it sought to challenge “a key part of executing” a removal order: a “short re-detention for removal.” Id. As the Third Circuit recognized, re-detaining the petitioner was “simply the enforcement mechanism the [government] picked to execute [the petitioner’s] removal order.” Id. at 298-99. And § 1252(g) “funnels review” of such claims away from the district courts, and to the courts of appeals through a petition for review. Id. at 299. Here, as in Tazu, Petitioner challenges the enforcement mechanism utilized to execute his final order of removal: the decision to detain him pending removal. Here, as in Tazu, this Court lacks jurisdiction over such claims under 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g).

Petitioner’s challenges regarding the execution of his final removal order are also foreclosed under 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9). In passing the REAL ID Act, Congress prescribed a single path for Article III review of removal orders: “a petition for review filed with an appropriate court of appeals.” 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(5); see also Verde-Rodriguez v. Atty. Gen., 734 F.3d 198, 201 (3d Cir. 2013). And as the REAL ID Act further provides. “[j]udicial review of all questions of law and fact, including interpretation of constitutional and statutory ² Relatedly, § 1252(g) bars district court review of challenges to the method by which DHS chooses to commence removal proceedings. See Alvarez v. U.S. Immigr. & Customs Enft, 818 F.3d 1194, 1203 (11th Cir. 2016) (“By its plain terms, [§ 1252(g)] bars us from questioning ICE’s discretionary decisions to commence removal — and thus necessarily prevents us from considering whether the agency should have used a different statutory procedure to initiate the removal process.”); Saadulloev v. Garland, No. 3:23-CV-00106, 2024 WL 1076106, at *3 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 12, 2024) (“The Government’s decision to arrest Saadulloev on April 4, 2023, clearly is a decision to ‘commence proceedings’ that squarely falls within the jurisdictional bar of § 1252(g).”).

1 provisions, arising from any action taken or proceeding brought to remove an alien from the United 2 States under this subchapter shall be available only in judicial review of a final order under 3 this section.” 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9) (emphasis added); see also, Johnson v. Arteaga-Martinez, at 4 584-585 (Thomas, J., concurring). (“Because [Petitioner] does not seek review of a final 5 removal order or otherwise invoke §1252, and because his claim ‘aris[es] from’ his removal 6 proceedings, I would vacate and remand with instructions to dismiss for lack of 7 jurisdiction.”)

8 Read in conjunction, 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9) and § 1252(a)(5) express Congress’s 9 intent to funnel judicial review of every aspect of removal proceedings into a petition for 10 review filed in the courts of appeals. See Nasrallah v. Barr, 590 U.S. 573, 580 (2020) 11 (recognizing that these provisions “clarified that final orders of removal may not be 12 reviewed in district courts, even via habeas corpus, and may be reviewed only in the courts 13 of appeals.”); see also Bonhometre v. Gonzales, 414 F.3d 442, 446 (3d Cir. 2005) (highlighting 14 Congress’s “clear intent to have all challenges to removal orders heard in a single forum (the 15 courts of appeals)” via petition for review). These provisions sweep more broadly than § 16 1252(g). See Reno, 525 U.S. at 483. Indeed, pursuant to § 1252(b)(9) and 1252(a)(5), “most 17 claims that even relate to removal” are improper if brought before the district court. E.O.H.C.
18 v. Sec’y United States Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 950 F.3d 177, 184 (3d Cir. 2020); see also Reno, 19 525 U.S. at 483 (describing § 1252(b)(9) as an “unmistakable zipper clause,” and defining a 20 zipper clause as one “that says ‘no judicial review in deportation cases unless this section 21 provides judicial review.’”).

22 Here, 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9) deprives this Court of jurisdiction over Petitioner’s claims.
23 Once again, the Third Circuit’s Tazu decision guides the analysis. In another part of that 24 decision, the Third Circuit held that the same claims concerning a revocation of supervised 25 release and re-detention which were barred under 1252(g) were also barred under 1252(b)(9) 26 because the claims arose from actions taken to execute the petitioner’s removal. 975 F.3d at 27 299. Here, as in Tazu, Petitioner’s claims arise directly out of actions taken to remove him, 28 and the questions raised by those claims are intertwined with his removal. See id. Another recent decision from the District Court in Khalil v. Joyce, No. 25-1963 (MEF), ECF No. 214, 2025 WL 1232369 (D.N.J. Apr. 29, 2025), does not cast doubt on the conclusion that 8 U.S.C. §§ 1252(g) and 1252(b)(9) apply here. In that case, unlike here, the petitioner had not been issued a final removal order, and so the District Court concluded that § 1252(b)(9) did not apply because that provision “takes away federal district court jurisdiction only after an order of removal has been entered,” and “none ha[d] been entered” in that case. Id. at *60. As to § 1252(g), the District Court found that it was inapplicable because the provision “pulls away jurisdiction over specific actions” by DHS—“not over actions by the Secretary of State, like [the] determination” at issue, “and not over across-the-board policies, like the one alleged” in that case. Id. Here, Petitioner does not challenge any action by the Secretary of State, nor does he attack any alleged broad-based policies. The reasoning behind the recent jurisdictional decision in Khalil does not affect the conclusion here.

That conclusion, for the reasons above, is that Petitioner’s claims fall within the INA’s jurisdiction-stripping provisions in 8 U.S.C. §§ 1252(g) and 1252(b)(9), so the Court should dismiss the petition for lack of jurisdiction.³

B. Petitioner’s Detention is Lawful.

There is no dispute that Petitioner is subject to an administrative final order of removal. As a result, the “post-order” detention provisions of 8 U.S.C. § 1231 govern. Those provisions require a 90-day mandatory removal period during which immigration officials must detain the alien while attempting to secure his or her removal. See 8 U.S.C. §§ 1231(a)(1), (2); see Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 683 (“After entry of a final removal order and during the 90-day removal period quo . . . aliens must be held in custody.” (internal citation omitted)). Congress, however, provided for the detention of aliens following the 90-day

³ Respondents are also aware of another out-of-district case Patel v. Barr, No. CV 20-3856, 2020 WL 6888250, at *3 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 24, 2020), but respectfully submit that the case is also distinguishable. In Patel, the district court held that the jurisdiction-stripping provisions in 8 U.S.C. §§ 1252(b)(9) and 1252(g) did not apply, notwithstanding Tazu, because while Tazu had a pending petition for review and had been granted a stay of removal, Patel had neither. Because, in Patel, the Board of Immigration Appeals delayed ruling on Patel’s various motions, the court found that Patel “ha[d] no access to judicial review.” Id. at *3.

1 removal period in certain circumstances. As discussed, the Supreme Court has interpreted 8 2 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(6) to allow for post-order detention for a period “reasonably necessary to 3 bring about the alien’s removal from the United States. Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 689. And 4 the Court held that detention for a period of six months is “presumptively reasonable.” Id.
5 After that six-month period, the alien bears the burden of showing that “there is no 6 significant likelihood of removal in the reasonably foreseeable future.” Id. If the alien 7 successfully makes that showing, “the Government must respond with evidence sufficient to 8 rebut that showing.” Id. In addition, the 90-day removal period may be tolled and the alien 9 “may remain in detention during such extended period if [he or she] fails or refuses to make 10 timely application in good faith for travel or other documents necessary to the alien’s 11 departure or conspires or acts to prevent the alien’s removal subject to an order of removal.”
12 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(1)(C).

13 Here, Petitioner has not reached the 90-day removal period. Petitioner is subject to a 14 final order of removal, however, there is a stay of removal entered. This tolls the beginning 15 of the removal period. The removal order is administratively final because the BIA 16 dismissed the appeal. The detention is lawful under § 1231 to effectuate the final removal 17 order.

18 CONCLUSION

19 For the foregoing reasons, the Court should dismiss the Amended Petition for Writ 20 of Habeas Corpus.
