vehicle being driven in Revere, Massachusetts. The registration on the vehicle had expired February 28, 2026, and so the police stopped the vehicle. Petitioner was the person driving the vehicle. The officer noticed large quantities of US dollars near his leg. The police asked him about the money and then petitioner moved his leg and the officer saw a pink bag and ordered the petitioner out of the vehicle. The police found [REDACTED] on his body, and he was arrested and they found [REDACTED] in his car. They also found $446 dollars. Petitioner was brought to the Reverse Police Station and then appeared the next day March 17, 2026, at the Chelsea District Court in Chelsea, Massachusetts where he was arraigned on charges of Drug Possession to Distribute Class B. He was released on his own person recognizance the same day. His next hearing date in criminal court is April 24, 2026.

[REDACTED]

Petitioner has also uploaded with this status report ICE's detainer. ICE took him into custody at the courthouse on March 17, 2026.

Since petitioner was granted parole, he would not be a member of both the Maldonado Bautista and Guerreo Orellana classes however he would be eligible for a bond hearing under the Destino case.

In the Destino case the petitioner had been granted parole for one year, entered the United States and then remained in the United States for another two years after his parole had expired before ICE took him into custody. The petitioner therefore was in the United States for three years during which the Court noted that petitioner had lived freely. In the Destino case the Court held that the petitioner's liberty interest was stronger because he was paroled into the United States and had lived in the United States for three years, during which he accrued an expectancy interest that he would be re-detained only if he violated the conditions of his release.

In this case petitioner was granted parole into the United States on November 21, 2022, and the parole expired on January 20, 2023. The petitioner continued to live in the United States from January 20, 2023, to the date of his detention on March 17, 2026, which is 3 years, 1 month and 25 days. Here petitioner's liberty interest is stronger due to being in the country for over 3 years and his criminal arrest is just an allegation at this point. The petitioner has not been convicted, is innocent until proven guilty and the government has the burden of proving the case.

In conclusion petitioner should be released from custody or in the alternative been granted a bond hearing based on similar grounds in the Destino case. The Immigration Judge can then address the criminal charges in determining whether to grant bond.
