Attorneys for Respondents

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

SERGEI TIULENEV, VYACHESLAV RYZKHOV, VIKTORIIA TIULENEVA, Petitioners, v. MARKWAYNE MULLIN, Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security; et al., Respondents.	Case No. 26-cv-3282-BAS-MSB RETURN TO PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

I. INTRODUCTION

Petitioners request the Court to order their immediate release from Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) custody or require that they be afforded a bond hearing. As arriving aliens found to have a credible fear of persecution, however, Petitioners' detention is mandated by 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii) until the conclusion of their removal proceedings. As Petitioners are subject to mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii), the Court should deny Petitioners' requests for relief.

II. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Petitioners are a natives and citizens of Russia. On October 10, 2025, Petitioners applied for admission to the United States at a port of entry. They did not then possess legal documentation to be in or enter the United States and were determined to be an arriving alien inadmissible under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(7)(A)(i)(I), placed into expedited removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1), and taken into Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) custody pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B). See Exhibit 1 (Forms I-213).[1] Petitioners were subsequently interviewed by an asylum officer, pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B) and issued a Notice to Appear (NTA) after receiving a positive credible fear determination. The filing of the NTA initiated removal proceedings, pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1229a, against Petitioners, and those proceedings remain ongoing. Within their removal proceedings under § 1229a, Petitioners had the opportunity to apply for relief from removal before an immigration judge (IJ), including asylum under 8 U.S.C. § 1158, withholding of removal under 8 U.S.C. § 1231(b)(3), and relief under the Convention Against Torture.

Petitioners advanced their individual merits hearing from May to April 21, 2026. See ECF No. 6 at 4. On that date, the IJ conducted the hearing, denied Petitioners' applications for relief, and ordered the Petitioners removed to Russia. See Exhibit 2 (Order of the Immigration Judge). Petitioners each appealed the IJ's decision to the Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA). See ECF No. 6 at 4. Because Petitioners' appeals remain pending, there is no administratively final order of removal for any of them at this time. Petitioners remain mandatorily detained under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii).

III. STATUTORY BACKGROUND

Section 235 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), codified at 8 U.S.C. § 1225, applies to an "applicant for admission," defined as an "alien present in the

[1] The attached exhibits are true copies, with redactions of private information, of documents obtained from Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) counsel.

United States who has not been admitted" or "who arrives in the United States." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). "[A]pplicants for admission fall into one of two categories, those covered by § 1225(b)(1) and those covered by § 1225(b)(2)." Jennings v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 287 (2018).

Section 1225(b)(1) applies to arriving aliens and "certain other" aliens "initially determined to be inadmissible due to fraud, misrepresentation, or lack of valid document." Id. (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i)). These aliens are generally subject to expedited removal proceedings. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i). But if "the alien indicates an intention to apply for asylum . . . or a fear of persecution," immigration officers will refer the alien for a credible fear interview. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii). "If the officer determines at the time of the interview that [the] alien has a credible fear of persecution . . . , the alien shall be detained for further consideration of the application for asylum." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii) (emphasis added). If the alien does not indicate an intent to apply for asylum, does not express a fear of persecution, or is "found not to have such a fear," they "shall be detained . . . until removed" from the United States. 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(b)(1)(A)(i), (B)(iii)(IV).

IV. ARGUMENT

A. Petitioners' Claim is Barred Under 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g).

Respondents contend that judicial review over Petitioners' claim is barred by 28 U.S.C. § 1252(g), which states that "[n]o court shall have jurisdiction to hear any cause or claim by or on behalf of any alien arising from the decision or action by the Attorney General to commence proceedings, adjudicate cases, or execute removal orders."

Here, Petitioners' claims of unlawful detention necessarily arise from the Department of Homeland Security's[2] decision to commence removal proceedings against them because that decision unavoidably triggers mandatory detention under 8

[2] "In 2002, Congress transferred the Attorney General's immigration enforcement responsibilities to the Secretary of Homeland Security." Ibarra-Perez v. United States, 154 F.4th 989, 995 n.2 (9th Cir. 2025).

U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii) until the conclusion of their removal proceedings. See, e.g., Wang v. United States, No. CV 10-0389 SVW (RCx), 2010 WL 11463156, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 18, 2010) (finding section 1252(g) bars judicial review of false imprisonment claim because the plaintiff's detention arose from the decision to commence removal proceedings, and in turn, the "statute mandating detention during removal proceedings of a person charged as an 'arriving alien.'").

As explained by another district court, removal proceedings are commenced when, as occurred here, "the alien is issued a Notice to Appear before an immigration court." Herrera-Correra v. United States, No. CV 08–2941 DSF (JCx), 2008 WL 11336833, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 11, 2008). The government "may arrest the alien against whom proceedings are commenced and detain that individual until the conclusion of those proceedings." Herrera-Correra, 2008 WL 11336833, at *3. "Thus, an alien's detention throughout this process arises from the [government's] decision to commence proceedings" and review of claims arising from such detention is barred under section 1252(g). Id. (citing Sissoko v. Rocha, 509 F.3d 947, 949 (9th Cir. 2007)); see also Wang, 2010 WL 11463156, at *6.

Because this habeas petition brings a claim "arising from the decision or action by the [government] to commence proceedings," review of Petitioners' claim is barred under 8 U.S.C § 1252(g). Thus, the Court must dismiss the petition.

B. Petitioners are Lawfully Detained Under the INA and the Constitution.

Even if the Court assumed jurisdiction to review Petitioners' claim, the Court must deny his habeas petition because Petitioners' detention is statutorily mandated under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii) and has not been unconstitutionally prolonged.

1. Petitioners are mandatorily detained under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1).

Petitioners are arriving aliens. See ECF No. 6 at 4 (admitting Petitioners "arrived at the automobile entrance to the San Ysidro Port of Entry and requested asylum."). As discussed above, arriving aliens are applicants for admission who are subject to expedited removal proceedings, see 28 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i), unless—as occurred here—an asylum officer has determined that they have a credible fear of persecution, see 28 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii). In such cases, the INA mandates that "the alien shall be detained for further consideration of the application for asylum." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii) (emphasis added); see also Matter of M-S, 27 I. & N. Dec. 509, 519 (AG 2019) ("all aliens transferred from expedited to full [removal] proceedings after establishing a credible fear are ineligible for bond"). Because Petitioners are arriving aliens found to have a credible fear of persecution and placed in full removal proceedings, their detention is mandated by section 1225(b) until the conclusion of their removal proceedings. See Jennings, 583 U.S. at 302 ("§§ 1225(b)(1) and (b)(2) mandate detention of aliens throughout the completion of applicable proceedings").

Petitioners request that the Court order they be released from ICE custody. But the Supreme Court has rejected such contention, explaining: "Read most naturally, §§ 1225(b)(1) and (b)(2) thus mandate detention of applicants for admission until certain proceedings have concluded. . . . Nothing in the statutory text imposes any limit on the length of detention. And neither § 1225(b)(1) nor § 1225(b)(2) says anything whatsoever about bond hearings." Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297. Except for temporary parole granted at the discretion of the Attorney General "for urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit" under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5), "there are no other circumstances under which aliens detained under § 1225(b) may be released." Id. at 300 (emphasis in original).

As Petitioners' removal proceedings are pending, and they have not been granted temporary parole, section 1225(b)(1)(B) mandates their detention until their proceedings have concluded. Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297 ("Once those proceedings end, detention under § 1225(b) must end as well."). Because Petitioners are lawfully detained under section 1225(b)(1)(B) and the statute does not entitle them to release at this time, their petition must be denied. See, e.g., Zelaya-Gonzalez v. Matuszewski, No. 23-CV-151 JLS-KSC, 2023 WL 3103811, at *3 (S.D. Cal. April 25, 2023) (applying Jennings to find that the petitioner had no right to release or a bond hearing).

2. Petitioners' detention is not unconstitutionally prolonged.

In Jennings, the Supreme Court evaluated the proper interpretation of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b). The Supreme Court stated that, "[r]ead most naturally, [8 U.S.C.] §§ 1225(b)(1) and (b)(2) . . . mandate detention of applicants for admission until certain proceedings have concluded." Id. at 297. In other words, neither 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) nor § 1225(b)(2) "impose[] any limit on the length of detention" and "neither § 1225(b)(1) nor § 1225(b)(2) say[] anything whatsoever about bond hearings." Id. The Supreme Court added that the sole means of release for noncitizens detained pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(b)(1) or (b)(2) prior to removal from the United States is temporary parole at the discretion of the Attorney General under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5). Id. at 300 ("That express exception to detention implies that there are no other circumstances under which aliens detained under [8 U.S.C.] § 1225(b) may be released.") (emphasis in original). "In sum, [8 U.S.C.] §§ 1225(b)(1) and (b)(2) mandate detention of aliens throughout the completion of applicable proceedings[.]" Id. at 302.

In Shaughnessy v. United States ex rel. Mezei, 345 U.S. 206, 207–09 (1953), a noncitizen in exclusion proceedings filed a habeas petition claiming that his prolonged detention without a hearing violated his constitutional rights. The Supreme Court rejected the petition, concluding that the noncitizen's continued detention did not deprive him of any due process rights, stating: "[A]n alien on the threshold of initial entry stands on a different footing: 'Whatever the procedure authorized by Congress is, it is due process as far as an alien denied entry is concerned.'" Id. at 212 (citation omitted).

In Department of Homeland Security v. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. 103, 138–40 (2020), the Supreme Court once again addressed the due process rights of individuals like Petitioners—inadmissible arriving noncitizens seeking initial entry into the United States. The Supreme Court stated that such individuals have no due process rights "other than those afforded by statute." Id. at 107; see also id. at 140 ("[A]n alien in respondent's position has only those rights regarding admission that Congress has provided by statute."). The Supreme Court noted that its determination was supported by "more than a century of precedent." Id. at 138 (citing Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U.S. 651, 660 (1892); U.S. ex rel. Knauff v. Shaughnessy, 338 U.S. 537, 544 (1950); Mezei, 345 U.S. at 212; Landon v. Plasencia, 459 U.S. 21, 32 (1982)). Because the only process due to Petitioners is that afforded under section 1225(b), the Court must reject their claim that their detention violates the Fifth Amendment's Due Process Clause and deny their requested relief. See Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 138–40; Mendoza-Linares, 51 F.4th at 1167; Rodriguez Diaz v. Garland, 53 F.4th 1189, 1206 (9th Cir. 2022) ("The recognized liberty interests of U.S. citizens and aliens are not coextensive: the Supreme Court has 'firmly and repeatedly endorsed the proposition that Congress may make rules as to aliens that would be unacceptable if applied to citizens.'") (quoting Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 522 (2003)); Zelaya-Gonzalez, 2023 WL 3103811, at *4 ("Binding Ninth Circuit and Supreme Court precedents are clear that Petitioner lacks any rights beyond those conferred by statute, and no statute entitles Petitioner to a bond hearing.").

Since the Supreme Court's decision in Thuraissigiam, numerous published decisions have acknowledged Thuraissigiam's impact on the precise Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause that Petitioners might have raised in this petition: Does an alien detained under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) have a due process right to release or a bond hearing after being detained for a certain period of time? The answer is no. See Mendoza-Linares v. Garland, No. 21-cv-1169-BEN (AHG), 2024 WL 3316306, *2 (S.D. Cal. June 10, 2024) ("[T]he Court finds that Petitioner has no Fifth Amendment right to a bond hearing pending his removal proceedings."); Zelaya-Gonzalez, 2023 WL 3103811. *3 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 25, 2023) (same); Rodriguez Figueroa v. Garland, 535 F. Supp. 3d 122, 126–27 (W.D.N.Y. 2021); Gonzales Garcia v. Rosen, 513 F. Supp. 3d 329, 336 (W.D.N.Y. 2021); St. Charles v. Barr, 514 F. Supp. 3d 570, 579 (W.D.N.Y. 2021); Petgrave v. Aleman, 529 F. Supp. 3d 665, 667 (S.D. Tex. 2021).

Even if the Court infers a constitutional right against prolonged mandatory detention, Petitioners' claim still fails. "In general, as detention continues past a year, courts become extremely wary of permitting continued custody absent a bond hearing." Sibomana v. LaRose, No. 22-cv-933-LL-NLS, 2023 WL 3028093, at *4 (S.D. Cal. April 20, 2023) (citation omitted); see also Durand v. Allen, No. 3:23-cv-00279-RBM-BGS, 2024 WL 711607, at *5 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 21, 2024) (detained over two-and-a-half years); Sanchez-Rivera v. Matuszewski, No. 22-cv-1357-MMA (JLB), 2023 WL 139801, at *6 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 9, 2023) (three years); Yagao v. Figueroa, No. 17-cv-2224-AJB-MDD, 2019 WL 1429582, at *2 (S.D. Cal. March 29, 2019) (two years). Petitioners' detention falls significantly short of the length courts have found to raise due process concerns.

In similar cases, courts in this district have applies the test in Banda v. McAleenan, 385 F. Sup. 3d 1099, 1106 (W.D. Wash. 2019), first adopted by Judge Battaglia in Kydyrali v. Wolf, 499 F. Supp. 3d 768 (S.D. Cal. 2020). Under Banda, to determine whether continued mandatory detention has become unreasonable, courts look at (1) total length of detention to date; (2) likely duration of future detention; (3) conditions of detention; (4) delays in the removal proceedings caused by the detainee; (5) delays in the removal proceedings caused by the government; and (6) the likelihood that the removal proceedings will result in a final order of removal. Banda, 385 F. Sup. 3d at 1106.

First, Petitioners' approximate 9-month detention should not favor granting their release. The length of detention in Kydyrali was 27 months, three times as long as Petitioners' detention. See Kydyrali, 499 F. Supp. 3d at 773. This relatively short duration does not justify habeas relief. See Prieto-Romero v. Clark, 534 F.3d 1053, 1065 (9th Cir. 2008) (finding no constitutional violation in detention of more than three years under § 1226(a)); see also Durand v. Allen, No. 3:23-cv-00279-RBM-BGS, 2024 WL 711607 at *5 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 21, 2024) (32 months); Sibomana, 2023 WL 3028093, at *4 (19 months); Sanchez-Rivera, 2023 WL 139801 at *6 (three years); Yagao v.

Figueroa, No. 17-CV-2224-AJB-MDD, 2019 WL 1429582, at *1 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 29, 2019) (42 months).

Notably, "the length of detention . . . is the most important factor." Banda, 385 F. Supp. 3d at 1118. In short, the period of Petitioners' detention is reasonable. Moreover, the length of Petitioners' detention, by itself, does not favor granting habeas relief. See Sadeqi v. LaRose, No. 25-cv-2587-RSH-BJW, 2025 WL 3154520, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 12, 2025) ("The Court agrees with Respondents that the length of Petitioner's detention to date—almost 12 months—does not by itself, without more, establish prolonged detention in violation of due process.").

Second, the likely duration of future detention weighs against the Petitioners. Petitioners' individual merits hearing took place April 21, 2026, at which point their path to removal (to Russia) was clear. However, Petitioners elected to appeal the decision of the immigration judge. See ECF No. 6 at 4. Any length of detention after that point is purely speculative. The third factor is arguably neutral as Petitioners have not presented any evidence to show their detention at Respondents' detention facility "resemble[s] penal confinement[.]" Banda, 385 F. Supp. 3d at 1119. The fourth and fifth factors (delays in the removal proceedings caused by Petitioners and the government) are neutral, as the record does not evidence any delays in removal proceedings. The sixth and final factor weighs in favor of Respondents because an immigration judge has entered a removal order against the Petitioners, which Petitioners have since appealed to the BIA.

Balancing the above factors, the record does not support a finding that "detention has become so unreasonable as to require an initial bond hearing," Sanchez-Rivera, 2023 WL 139801, at *6, or an order requiring Petitioners' release.

Petitioners were lawfully detained when they applied for admission to the United States. As a result, Petitioners are rightly considered applicants for admission, and their mandatory detention does not violate due process. See Markov v. LaRose, No. 25-CV-3811 JLS (SBC), 2026 WL 92069 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 13, 2026) ("Petitioner's length of detention, without more, does not render his detention unreasonable."); Duran Romero v. LaRose, No. 25-cv-3567-AGS-VET, ECF No. 7 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 14, 2026); Shahin v. Noem, No. 25-cv-2496-AGS-KSC, ECF No. 12 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 23, 2025); Cordova Cordova, No. 25-cv-2426-BAS-DDL, ECF No. 9 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 14, 2025); Mendez Ramirez, 612 F. Supp. 3d at 221; Gonzalez Aguilar v. Wolf, 448 F. Supp. 3d at 1212; de la Rosa Espinoza, 2020 WL 3452967, at *6-8.

V. CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated herein, Respondents respectfully request that the Court dismiss this petition for lack of jurisdiction or deny it on the merits.
